WASHINGTON. -- Bruce H. Hasenkamp, Director of the President's Commission on White House Fellowships, today announced the names of the 99 young men and women selected as Regional Semifinalists in the competition for 1976-77 White House Fellowships.

Chosen from among 2864 applicants, these candidates will next be evaluated by Commission-appointed panels of distinguished community leaders in 11 cities from coast to coast. Each panel will determine which of its candidates to designate as Regional Finalists.

The panels will interview the Regional Finalists during March, and the top 30-35 of these candidates will be selected as National Finalists, from among whom the Presidential Commission will nominate 14-19 White House Fellows to the President on May 24.

The White House Fellowship competition this year is the most rigorous since the first year of the program a decade ago. Just under 41,000 requests for applications were filled compared with 20,000 last year; and applications increased from 1380 in 1974 and 2307 in 1975 to this year's 2864. That number was exceeded only once in the program's history--in 1964-65, immediately after the late President Lyndon B. Johnson's creation of the Fellowships.

MORE-MORE-MORE

Of this year's 99 Regional Semifinalists, 22 are employed in private business and industry; 18 are university professors, administrators, and researchers; and 16 are with state, county and local government (including two mayors and a city manager). There are 10 lawyers, eight career military officers, four nurses and health services administrators, four bankers, three public school teachers and administrators, and three students.

Also in the group are two journalists, two pharmacists, two consultants, a Lutheran pastor, a symphony conductor, a foundation officer, a day care center executive director, and the financial vice president of a large monastic order.

Created in 1964 to provide outstanding young Americans with firsthand experience in the process of governing the nation, the White House Fellowship program is open to U.S. citizens from all occupations and professions who are no less than 23 and no more than 36 years of age by the commencement of the Fellowship year. Employees of the Federal Government are not eligible, with the exception of career Armed Forces personnel.

In addition to their educational assignments with the Vice President and members of the Cabinet and the President's principal White House staff, the Fellows participate in an extensive program of 250-300 off-record seminar meetings with top government officials, scholars, journalists, and leaders from other segments of private life.

Leadership, intellectual and professional ability, and a commitment to community and nation are the broad criteria employed in the selection process.

Applications for the 1977-78 program will be available in August 1976. Application forms and additional information on the program can be obtained from the President's Commission on White House Fellowships, The White House, Washington, D.C. 20415.
